Live the City starts by “Connecting the Dots”

The first day of the METROPOLIS 2015 Annual Meeting in Buenos Aires concludes with the dynamic “Connecting the dots” presentation. It has shown the multiple dimensions of the partnership, which participants have called “network of networks.”

In the morning took place the workshop on "Gender mainstreaming in local policies" organized by the Metropolis Women Network. It focused on strategies for cities to implement gender mainstreaming and how the Women Network can contribute to gender mainstreaming within METROPOLIS.

In parallel, the METROPOLIS Youth workshop has been characterized by its participatory dimension. In it, young people presented their case studies related to the encouragement of the involvement of young people in the design of their city.

At noon a lunch meeting between representatives of the cities promoting initiatives has stimulated an exchange of knowledge and has been the spearhead for a more collaborative work in the future.

METROPOLIS regional secretaries meeting have also taken the opportunity today to meet and discuss various aspects of the association. During this meeting, it was mentioned the succession of the Acting Secretary General in the coming months.
